

Spotify Dashboard Adjustment Checklist

Anchor has evolved into Spotify for Podcasters -- and while many tools remain, their locations and functionality have shifted. This guide helps you quickly adjust to the updated dashboard and highlights where to go if you're ready for more advanced monetization options.

Where to Find Your Episodes

- [] Go to <https://podcasters.spotify.com>
- [] Log into your dashboard
- [] Click on 'Content' in the left sidebar
- [] All your episodes will appear here -- click any title to edit, update metadata, or view details
- [] You can sort by date or search by title to find older episodes

How to Update Monetization Settings

- [] Click on the 'Monetize' tab in your dashboard navigation
- [] If eligible, you'll see options for subscriptions, ads, or automated monetization
- [] You can connect a Stripe account to receive payouts
- [] Spotify's tools are convenient, but limited to their ecosystem -- external hosts may offer dynamic ads, custom integrations, or brand deals

Where Your Audience Analytics Live Now

- [] Click on 'Analytics' in the dashboard
- [] You'll find stats like listener count, followers, top episodes, and listener retention
- [] Spotify's analytics are Spotify-specific. For a full audience view across Apple, Google, etc., you may need a third-party host or aggregator
- [] Consider exporting your data or connecting third-party services if switching hosts

Want More Monetization Options?

Spotify makes it easy to get started, but serious podcasters often outgrow its limitations.

If you're looking for flexible monetization, broader distribution, and tools that grow with your show, check out this resource:

Best Podcast Platforms for Monetization